SUPREME COURT-SPECIAL TERM.

Can Attachments Issue for a Penalty in a Charter Party? King v. Baker and Austher.—An attachment had been is-gued by the plaintiff against the ship Ocean Rover for the jum of $17,600, and she had been selzed and detained by the Sheriff. The claim arose for alleged violation of a stipulation in a charter party, by which a penalty in the sum of $17,000 was agreed to between the parties for any violation of the agreemen's contained in that instrument. The defendants contended that a penal sum was not a doot for which an attachment could be issued. The plaintiff agreed that it was evidence of a debt stated and agreed between the parties to the contract. The question, though novel, it was submitted, was in favor of the right. The Court, after argument, reserved its decision. Soudder and Carter for the motion; Edwin James and King for piaintiff.
